1999–2000 DIRECTORY OF VISITING FULBRIGHT SCHOLARS AND OCCASIONAL LECTURERS: INTRODUCTION

Each year approximately 750 scholars from abroad hold grants to conduct research and lecture at U.S. colleges and universities under the Fulbright Scholar Program. While the majority of the scholars apply for grants through Fulbright commissions or U.S. embassies in their home countries, approximately 40 are invited by colleges and universities in the United States to lecture in their specific fields under the Scholar-in-Residence or European Union Scholar-in-Residence Programs.

The Directory

To acquaint the U.S. academic community with the visiting scholars and their fields of specialization, the Council for International Exchange of Scholars (CIES), which cooperates with the United States Department of State in administering the Fulbright Scholar Program, publishes an annual directory of visiting scholars and occasional lecturers.

Available in the fall, this directory provides a comprehensive listing of scholars by academic discipline, which includes their home geographic areas, U.S. affiliations, lecturing or research project titles, and dates of stay in the United States. Scholars are also listed in separate indexes arranged alphabetically by last name, by home geographic area, by host state, and by involvement in special programs or seminars. These listings can also be found online at www.cies.org.

Grants for some 1999–2000 visiting scholars will not be confirmed until after this directory is published. The names of these scholars will appear in the next edition—just as scholars who received grants but were not listed in the 1998–99 edition appear in this directory beginning on page 139. An updated listing of 1999–2000 visiting scholars will be posted online in early 2000.

The Occasional Lecturer Program

The Occasional Lecturer Program provides an opportunity for colleges and universities to host Fulbright grantees as short-term guest lecturers. It enables grantees to share their specific research interests with the U.S. academic community, speak on the history and culture of their countries, exchange ideas with U.S. students and faculty, become better acquainted with U.S. higher education and the diversity of academic life in this country, and create linkages between their home and host institutions.

This directory, through its listing of grantees' lecturing and research topics, assists institutions that wish to invite scholars to their campuses as occasional lecturers. Colleges and universities are encouraged to arrange guest lecturing visits by contacting scholars directly, using the faculty associate names and addresses provided. The Occasional Lecturer Program is able to provide funding, although limited, for the round-trip transportation of scholars who accept lecturing invitations.

A visiting scholar who wishes to accept an occasional lecturer invitation must submit to CIES a formal letter of invitation from the host institution, along with dates of travel and approximate cost of round-trip economy airfare, at least 1 month before the visit is to take place. (If possible, scholars should try to submit their requests even further in advance.) Within 2 weeks of receiving information, CIES will inform the scholar whether the travel request has been granted. The scholar is responsible for purchasing an airline ticket and will be reimbursed up to a maximum of $750 after the travel takes place. Due to limited funding, each scholar is eligible for only one trip, although requests to visit more than one institution on a single trip will be considered. An exception to the one-trip rule may be made if the scholar guest lectures at minority-serving colleges and universities.

Professional organizations wishing to invite scholars as presenters or discussants at meetings may also participate in the Occasional Lecturer Program. Meeting coordinators are encouraged to arrange participation by contacting visiting scholars directly.

Responsibilities of Institutions Hosting Occasional Lecturers

Institutions wishing to host a visiting Fulbright scholar should develop a comprehensive plan of activities and arrangements to share with the scholar well in advance of the proposed visit. Host institutions are asked to provide local transportation, accommodations, and meals for their visitor. It is important to inform the scholar about the kind of support the host institution will provide prior to arrival. The length of the lecturer's stay at the institution will depend upon the particular interests of the academic community and the facilities available, but the period should allow an opportunity for the scholar to become acquainted with the educational program and academic life of the host institution. A program of 2 to 3 days' duration is suggested; a longer period may be advisable if visits to several member institutions of a consortium are planned.

Suggested Activities for Visiting Lecturers

- Department- or school-wide lectures to students and/or faculty
- Lectures in classrooms where the scholar can make a contribution to the discipline
- Faculty meetings that allow for an exchange of ideas
- Informal gatherings of students and faculty
- Home hospitality offered by faculty
- Meetings with community organizations or religious groups that have a special interest in international relations
- Panel participation at professional conferences

Examples of Recent Participants in the Occasional Lecturer Program

Administrators and faculty at Oakwood College, a minority-serving institution, determined that the research of a Lebanese Fulbright scholar was germane to a new international social work course they had just added to the curriculum. The scholar applied for and received funds to travel to the college, where she gave a successful lecture on "Globalization and Working Women in the Third World."

A Macedonian scholar visited SUNY–Plattsburg to speak on "The Crisis in Yugoslavia and Its Impact on the Republic of Macedonia." This lecture was very well attended and resulted in the recommendation that an exchange program be established between SUNY and the grantee's home institution, the University of Macedonia.

A Moroccan scholar participated in an international workshop on "Slavery and the African Diaspora" at Northwestern University. As a direct result of the scholar's visit, a discussion of the joint translation and publication of some original Arabic texts dealing with the question of slavery in North and West Africa has developed.

A Russian scholar from Moscow State University visited New Mexico State University, New Mexico Highlands University, and Western New Mexico University—all minority-serving institutions—and lectured on "Bridging the Gap: Russian-American Intercultural Communication." This was the first opportunity many of the students had had to discuss recent political changes in Russia with a Russian scholar.

A Vietnamese grantee was invited to George Mason University to lecture on the impact of socioeconomic development and policy on forest resources in Vietnam. This visit has led to an effort to initiate an exchange program between the scholar's home institution, Vietnam National University, and George Mason University that will focus on geography and environmental problems.

VISITING SCHOLAR STORIES: EXPERIENCES IN THE UNITED STATES

Included in this year's directory are some recent examples of how the Visiting Scholar Program, the Scholar-in-Residence Program, and the Occasional Lecturer Program have benefitted both host institutions and the visiting scholars themselves. The scholars routinely express how personally and professionally important their experiences in the United States have been. Institutions hosting visiting Fulbrighters are equally pleased with how much their visitors are able to share with their students and faculty—from cultural details about their home countries to technical expertise in a variety of disciplines as diverse as astrophysics, music, and languages. The goals of the Fulbright Program are carried out each year through these exchanges; below are just a few examples illustrating how this was achieved in 1998–99.

1998–99 Visiting Scholar Stories

A widely respected Israeli scholar from the University of Haifa spent a year at the University of Oklahoma researching and writing about Bisha, the ordeal by fire practiced in Egypt and the Levant; teaching courses on minorities and women in the Middle East; editing a book about Syria; giving public lectures to the academic and local communities; and overseeing student research projects. The scholar, a former advisor to Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin on Arab relations, is the author of numerous books and articles on political behavior, dispute mediation, and cultural conflicts in the Middle East.

According to his faculty host, the professor's visit "has been a tremendously enriching and rewarding experience for our university, the Oklahoma City community, and for me personally." His host institution was so impressed by the scholar's efforts that administrators have asked him to remain in Oklahoma to engage in a number of related follow-on activities. These include helping develop the University's Center for Peace Studies, strengthening the institution's Judaic Studies Program, and organizing academic conferences on the Middle East peace process. His hosts hope to utilize the scholar's contacts and knowledge to involve Israeli, Jordanian, Palestinian, Egyptian, Saudi, and U.S. academics in the latter activity and to initiate exchange relationships with the University of Haifa in Israel, Bethlehem University under the Palestinian Authority, and Yarmouk University in Jordan. Recently, the scholar participated in the "Critical Issues in Terrorism and Political Violence Forum," a symposium that brings together leading experts to discuss terrorism issues. The forum was hosted by the Oklahoma City National Memorial Institute for the Prevention of Terrorism.

The affiliation of a Middle Eastern scholar at a Montana institution illustrates how a Fulbright award can introduce both grantees and their hosts to new cultures. During the summer of 1999, the faculty and many of the students in the Department of Animal and Range Sciences at Montana State University collaborated for the first time with a scholar from Lebanon. The grantee, an associate professor at the American University of Beirut, spent his 6-month grant conducting research on environmental adaptation in livestock. In addition to his work, the scholar became an active member of the Bozeman community and participated in a number of campus organizations and field trips. This participation allowed him to counter some of the misconceptions Montana colleagues and students had about his country. His hosts commented that their knowledge of the Middle East before the scholar's visit was limited and often biased by media coverage. As a result of the scholar's willingness to interact with the community, however, he significantly increased their understanding of the recent and past history of the Middle East and of Lebanon and Syria in particular. Faculty from the Department of Animal and Range Sciences, inspired by their contact with the scholar, hope to visit Lebanon to discuss collaboration on future research projects.

A recent scholar from Namibia spent 10 months conducting research on human rights education and environmental education at the University of California–Berkeley. Fulbrighters from Africa often find that hectic university schedules and the lack of source materials available at their own institutions present significant obstacles to their work. As a result, many who obtain Fulbright grants for research in the United States find time and resources to be the most important benefits of their awards. The Namibian scholar characterized his Fulbright assignment as a much-needed break from the hectic academic life he leads at the University in Namibia, where he serves as director of the Ecumenical Institute for Namibia. His months in the United States were a special opportunity to read, write, reflect, and spend time with his family, which he was pleased to see thrive in their host community. His wife, a lecturer of Afrikaans literature, worked on completing her Ph.D., and his two sons, immersed in a performance-driven culture where choice and freedom were emphasized, excelled academically. Presented with the resources of Berkeley, the scholar was thrilled with what seemed to him an endless supply of information on his research topic. The success of his research, the numerous materials he acquired for his home institution, and his family's personal growth gave the scholar a renewed determination "to dedicate my academic talents to the strengthening of a global culture of freedom and democracy, human dignity and human rights, care for our environment and a measure of justice to the millions of marginalized people at the receiving end of global practices of greed and self-interest."

Many visiting scholars work hard to develop lasting relationships with their host institutions that will allow for continued educational and cultural exchanges extending beyond their Fulbright grants. A professor of education at Vista University in South Africa spent 4 months as a visiting researcher at the University of Missouri–Kansas City and has since ensured that further collaboration with his U.S. colleagues takes place. In March 1999, he participated in an international conference in South Africa, delivering a paper based on his experiences as a Fulbrighter. At the scholar's invitation, a U.S. colleague from Kent State University also attended the conference. In addition, the scholar's grant has led to discussions between Vista and Kent State about collaboration at the doctoral level in educational management. He also inspired others to participate in the program—one of his students has received a 1999–2000 Fulbright grant for graduate study. As the scholar explained in his own words, the "Fulbright Scholarship empowered me tremendously to improve the quality of learning and share ideas and skills with those that I interact [with] locally, regionally, nationally and internationally."

The secretary for the United Kingdom's Royal Commission on Long-Term Care for the Elderly spent 6 months at the University of Maryland–College Park studying the long-term care system being developed in this country. The scholar used his grant to address specific concerns and recommendations made in the Royal Commission's recently released report on long-term care. He first made a comparative study of the overall trends in how long-term care will be provided in the United States and noted innovations and developments that could be applied in the United Kingdom. He then examined how U.S. policy makers are preparing to meet the demographic pressures that are expected to emerge in the early part of the next century. In the course of his work, the scholar gave a series of papers to academics and senior policy makers at the state and federal level and on Capitol Hill and contributed an article to an international symposium on long-term care. He met with a range of practitioners and visited a number of care facilities across the United States. He intends to use the report that will result from his research as a practical supplement to the work of the Royal Commission, highlighting areas where the United Kingdom can learn from the United States as well as problems that remain unresolved in both countries.

A Spanish scholar from the Universidad Complutense de Madrid spent 2 years at the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics conducting research on brown dwarfs and open clusters. Professionally, the scholar found his experience in the United States to be tremendously useful because it put him in contact with leading experts in his field. A key experience, he explained, was serving on the organizing committee for the 10th Cambridge Workshop in Cool Stars, Stellar Systems, and the Sun, which he described as the "most important gathering in my field." While his professional pursuits have kept him away from Spain, he continued to initiate projects with Spanish research teams during his stay at Harvard, and he will most likely participate in the European Space Agency's "DARWIN" project, which aims to discover other Earth-like planets and determine whether these planets could sustain human life. With his Fulbright assignment finished, he traveled next to Heidelberg, Germany, to study at another prestigious institution, the Max Planck Institute of Astronomy.

The acting director of the School of Maritime Business and Management at Dokuz Eylul University in Turkey found her time in this country an excellent opportunity to interact with U.S. colleagues. "During my stay in the U.S.," she wrote, "I found the chance to share my knowledge with my colleagues in different institutions through my lectures and seminars. I am again grateful to Fulbright that I was able to discuss my observations, opinions and experience with scientists from different countries who are all experts in our field. Continuing these fruitful relations will be my utmost priority in the coming years." In addition, she found her association with both the Fulbright Program and her host institution, the University of Michigan–Ann Arbor, extremely useful, reporting "I have felt the pride of being a Fulbrighter at every relation I had with the U.S. shipyards. Both being a Fulbrighter and being affiliated with the most prestigious Navel Architecture Department in the U.S. helped me a lot to complete my project" and "helped my dream [of completing a comparative study between U.S. and Turkish shipyards] come true."

The exchange experience of a grantee from Belarus provided both the scholar and his hosts with a rare opportunity for interaction. The scholar, an associate professor at the International Institute of Labor and

VISITING SCHOLAR STORIES: EXPERIENCES IN THE UNITED STATES

Social Relations in Minsk, explained, “People of Belarus really do not know much about the U.S. and do not have many opportunities to visit other countries. Moreover, while here I met some Americans who did not know the name of the country Belarus, so there are benefits for my American friends and colleagues as well as myself. Nowadays, it is clear that the globe is not very large, and we must try to get to know each other better, and I think the Fulbright Program really does a great deal to achieve this goal. I consider scholar exchanges an important part of these larger objectives, and I have found the opportunities provided by the Fulbright Program outstanding. I now have lots of impressions about the U.S. and American people to share with my colleagues and other people at home.”

While teaching family law at the University of Baltimore’s Law Center, an Indian professor from the University of Delhi learned to overcome the challenges of teaching U.S. students about life and law in a culture very different from their own. Despite the difficulties, the scholar found his students very interested in India and Indian law. In addition, he spoke to the university’s faculty, the Baltimore Metropolitan Council, and students at the Northeastern University School of Law in Boston. In all cases, he thought his presentations were rewarding and educational for both the audience and himself. After returning to India, the scholar intended to maintain the connections he developed in Baltimore by hosting U.S. colleagues, continuing research collaborations, and introducing new courses based on his experiences in the United States.

A Chinese scholar, meanwhile, believed that his grant gave him invaluable, and otherwise unattainable, insight into life and culture in the United States. After spending a year at the University of Florida—Gainesville, the English professor from Shandong University explained that his grant provided “an opportunity to take a direct look at the people and life of America. Through the news media and personal contacts, I have acquired a genuine knowledge of the values, concerns and ways of doing things in America. Such knowledge can never be obtained secondhand and is very important to my giving a true picture of America in my future teaching and research.” Upon his return home, the scholar planned to write a book about Southern literature, the topic of his Fulbright research.

The Scholar-in-Residence Program

The Scholar-in-Residence (SIR) Program differs from other Fulbright programs administered by CIES as it is an institutional program, primarily benefitting U.S. students and institutions. This does not mean, however, that the program has not been extremely valuable to the scholars themselves. A Russian scholar-in-residence, affiliated at a Florida university, remarked, “From the first day of my being here, I was surrounded with care and support . . . It was also a pleasant surprise to see here such growing interest to what is happening overseas and to my home country in particular. This helps [me] believe that the world of [the] future will be the world of understanding, tolerance and cooperation, but not of contradiction and tensions. . . . I am really proud to consider myself a part of the prestigious Fulbright family and will try to do everything I can for its benefit.”

The vice dean of China’s Guang-Xi University, a specialist in women’s studies as well as in foreign languages, received a Fulbright grant to teach a semester course on women in the 20th century at Lewiston Clark State College in Idaho. The grantee introduced her U.S. students to Chinese concepts of female beauty, which have been heavily influenced by American standards. The scholar discussed the restrictions faced by Chinese women and why they are drawn to what they see as American symbols of freedom, like the “Wild West” and the story of Huckleberry Finn. The grantee, who strongly believes that Chinese women should take an active role in establishing their freedom, urges women to take part in policy making and to work toward equal opportunity in arenas beyond education and employment. According to the scholar, her experiences in the United States have increased her ability to contribute to the improvement of women’s status in China by increasing her understanding of how women live and work in other areas of the world.

Another recent scholar-in-residence is one of the most prominent singers in Bolivia and an expert on the Spanish Zarzuela, a form of musical theater. He spent a semester at the University of Central Arkansas, where he was quite active in the institution’s Latin American Culture Project. Besides teaching about Latin American music and culture, the scholar presented recitals of opera, song, and Zarzuela; gave a public lecture on the Spanish Zarzuela; and organized a recital showcasing the talents of several Arkansan singers.

ADMINISTRATION AND FUNDING OF THE FULBRIGHT PROGRAM

The Fulbright Program is authorized by Public Law 87–256, the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961, as amended. The purpose of the program is “to enable the government of the United States to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries . . . and thus to assist in the development of friendly, sympathetic, and peaceful relations between the United States and other countries of the world.” The primary source of funding is an annual appropriation made by the Congress to the United States Department of State. Participating governments and host institutions in many countries and in the United States also contribute financially through cost-sharing, as well as by indirect support such as salary supplements, tuition waivers, university housing, and other benefits.

Grants are made to U.S. citizens and nationals of other countries for a variety of educational activities, primarily university lecturing, advanced research, graduate study, and teaching in elementary and secondary schools. Grants for foreign nationals are available through the binational Fulbright commission/foundation or U.S. embassy in the country of citizenship. The Fulbright Scholar-in-Residence (SIR) Program and European Union SIR Program also provide opportunities for U.S. institutions to host visiting lecturers.

The J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board, composed of 12 educational and public leaders appointed by the President of the United States, has statutory responsibility under the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961 (Fulbright-Hays Act), as amended, for the selection of all Fulbright grantees and the supervision of the Fulbright Program worldwide, including the formulation of policy guidelines governing such exchanges.

The United States Department of State, Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, develops policies to assure fulfillment of the purposes of the program and administers it with the assistance of binational educational commissions and foundations in some 51 countries that have executive agreements with the United States for continuing exchange programs, United States embassies in 89 other countries, and a number of cooperating agencies in the United States.

The binational Fulbright commissions and foundations establish the numbers and categories of grants, based on the annual commission/foundation program proposal and on their consultations with local universities; review applications of nominated U.S. participants and arrange or confirm their academic affiliations; make travel arrangements for grantees and their families; and provide orientations and facilitative services. In a country without a commission or foundation, the public affairs section of the U.S. embassy develops the program and supervises it locally.

The Council for International Exchange of Scholars (CIES), affiliated with the Institute of International Education, is a private organization that facilitates international exchange in higher education. Under a cooperative agreement with the United States Department of State, CIES assists in the administration of the Fulbright Scholar Program for faculty and professionals.
